Alvin F. Smith, Barre's oldest resident, in chatting about the weather to-day, remarked that 76 years ago last Monday the ground hereabouts was covered with two feet of snow and that the drifts were very high, while sheep and lambs, out to pasture, were cut down in great numbers. Mr. Smith fears by the "feel" of the air that we are in for more cold weather. He will be 96 years of age next week Thursday.

The boy scouts of the Presbyterian and Baptist churches were hastily summoned together last night at 6 o'clock by the sounding of a bugle from every ward.

As an indication of how promptly the scout are trained to obey commands, it is interesting to note that forty out of sixty boys, belonging to both troops, were present at a given point within half an hour after the call was sounded. It is proposed to repeat the call some evening in the near future, when it is expected that a larger percentage of the troops will respond on shorter notice.

The two men, who were arrested yesterday forenoon on Granite street by Officers Carlo and Morris, were arraigned in city court last evening and gave their names as Ed Prendon of Montpelier and John Cookson of Worcester.

Both pleaded guilty to first offense of intoxication and each was assessed $8.84. Cookson's fine was paid by his brother who came here from Worcester, and Prendon was unable to pay and went to jail for 20 days. When the men were searched at the station the officers found nothing whatever in their pockets except a bottle of whiskey on Prendon. The latter is the man whom it was claimed, was going through Cookson's pockets at the M. & W. station, which led to their arrest.

The officers concluded that Prendon got nothing from his hunt.

His Security.

When Eben Foster asked Squire Lane to lend him $200 to invest in the dry goods business the squire dryly inquired what Mr. Foster had to offer him in the way of security.

"Security?" said Eben, with an air of injured dignity. "Well, squire, I'll tell you what I have to offer—three solid silver teaspoons, a handsome brass warming pan, a pair of deerskin vases, large size, and the material for as much as three feather beds. If not four, right on the backs of my dock o' geese, an' five Plymouth Rock hens."

"You can call 'em all yours till I pay the money back, an' I'll take care of 'em for you free of charge. I don't know what anybody could want more'n that for security."—Youth's Companion.

The American Indian.

The old question of the origin of the red man of America is still an open one. The last word by no means having been said. The most probable theory is that which links the Indian with the Mongoloids of East Africa, whose physical characteristics are strikingly similar to those of the American aborigine. Between the Indian and the Japanese there are many pronounced resemblances, and some excellent authorities are of the opinion that it was from that eastern race that the Indian originally sprang. If, as some think, the Eskimos are the best representatives of the Indian as he was upon his arrival here, the theory of the Japanese origin is immensely strengthened, since the likeness between the Eskimo and the Japanese is striking indeed.—New York American.

Talking to the Doctor.

While making some professional calls in a sparsely settled district I came upon a little plump, rosy cheeked girl trudging toward home with her slate and dinner pail in her hand. I asked her to ride with me. I could see that she was a very timid child, and efforts to engage her in conversation were unavailing. She would meekly answer "Yes" or "No," but not another word would she speak.

A few weeks later I was called to the little girl's home to attend another member of the family for a slight ailment. When about to leave the mother spoke up smilingly and said: "Do you remember my little girl riding with you a few weeks ago? Well, when she got home she said, 'Mamma, I rode from school with the doctor, and he kept talking with me and talking with me, and I just didn't know what to do, for you know doctors charge you when you talk with them, and I didn't have any money.'"—National Monthly.

Wanted to Come Back.

"You won't make any mistake in buying this car, Mr. Juggins," said the agent. "It is the best in the market. There isn't any come-back to our output."

"Then I don't want it," retorted Juggins. "There wasn't any come-back to the last car I had, and I had to walk back. Haven't you anything you can show me with a few return attachments?"—Warner's Weekly.

POINTS ON MULE RAISING.

How This Neglected Animal May Be Used With Profit By Farmers.

Mules, much abused and neglected animals, are not generally understood by farmers. writes "Ed" McLaughlin in the Rural New Yorker. A mule in the first place must be of good stock, not an offspring of some scrubby mare, but a mare with good breeding qualities.

A mule of the mammoth stock supposed to be the best mule under all conditions. Mules are cheaper than colts, for the service fee is not generally as high. Many people make a mistake in working the mare too soon after foaling. Never work a mare under ten days; then she can do light work, but the mule must be brought in from work never allow the mule to suck as long as the mare is warm.

After a mule is two or three weeks old turn it out in a lot away from the mare, especially at night, for a mule is very hard on a mare, much more than colts.

When the mule is about two months old he may be allowed to eat a few oats, about a pint in the beginning. Increase as he grows older, or the same amount of bran along with a little hay; alfalfa is preferred. At the age of five months a mule should be weaned, not gradually, but all at once. Take it away from the mare and never let it suck afterward. He should be put by himself or tied up. At this time you can give an ear of corn at a meal and a small amount of hay. The mule should be turned out in fair weather and not left to stand in stable.

A mule should be made before he is a year old. This can be done by good breeding and the proper care. It is not necessary to give a great quantity of food to him in the winter, but it must be of the kind to keep him growing, such as alfalfa, hay, silage, corn fodder, some corn and chopped food occasionally. Oats are very good, but very expensive food. In the spring he may be turned out on pasture during the day and fed some hay at night and morning because grass at this time is very washy. As the grass gets older leave in pasture, but be sure to have plenty of shade and water. A mule should not be broken before he is three years old, although many are broken before they are near this age. With the proper handling he will be found to be easier to manage than horse colts. I always work them beside a good steady horse.

SMITH & CUMINGS

Do not work mules together until thoroughly broken, or you may have some trouble. After this time he may be found to do more and better work than a horse colt at the same age; that is, you can work him harder. When at this time you may say that a mule is easier raised and at less cost than horse colts, in that they do not require as much care and less food to keep them in good condition, mule colts will bring more money than an average horse colt, even though he may be blemished in some way. He will sell when a blemished horse colt would not sell.

Barre should have a plant to manufacture building granite and not let our neighbors obtain the new industry.
